TRAINING & WORKSHOP ON HERITAGE ORGANIZATION MANAGEMENT IN INDONESIA

BALI, 8-12 NOVEMBER 2006

BACKGROUND

Indonesia has numbers of important heritage organizations whereas many of them have insufficient trained personnel to manage and operate their daily activities properly. Most of them are lack of heritage organization skill, conservation expertise and financial aspect management. It is crucial to conduct a training and workshop to develop skilled human resources who will be able to manage the heritage conservation group in a sustainable way. A side of the conventional of heritage conservation training, there is a need for discussion on the response to conservation and change. It is important to develop conducive environment for heritage conservation"

There have been some communication and cooperation between Indonesian and Australian heritage organizations. The close geographic location encourages and Australian heritage organization. The close geographic location encourages us to develop closer cooperation between the two neighboring countries. Some heritage conservation studies had been conducted by Australian expert in Bali (culture heritage conservation in Bali urban infrastructure project, 2000). Thereas Bali Kuna Heritage societies had discussed a possible assistant from Australian council of National Trust heritage experts in sharing their knowledge and idea of development of heritage organization. The Australian council of National and Australia Indonesia Institute had committed to contribute the funding for this event. The National Trust of Queensland and the National Trust of south Australia would provide their experts to be the trainer.
